Dingle Peninsula

The Dingle Peninsula or Corca Dhuibhne, stretches 30 miles (48 kilometres) into the Atlantic Ocean on the south-west coast on Ireland's Wild Atlantic Way.

The magnificent coastline consists of steep sea-cliffs such as Slea Head, dramatic headlands, rugged cliffs broken by sandy beaches and beautiful harbours. These stunning beaches allow for lots of outdoor recreation, and the area is a cultural hub with a large percentage of Irish speakers.

Spend time in a place rich in tradition, literature and culture, where native Gaelic prospers alongside modern languages, where the perfect harmony created by nature restores the spirit, where you can relax and savour the scenery, flora and fauna, the art, photography, walking & craft distillery and breweries, or just meet the people – the choice is yours!

Lose yourself. Allow yourself to be pampered in one of the award winning and renowned restaurants, bars & cafés.
